Please describe how you have incorporated multiculturalism into one of your classes and/or content areas.

I incorporated multiculturalism into our savings and investing unit in personal finance to show students the relevance of saving practices across different cultures and economic backgrounds. We discussed in the unit how different cultural values and traditions influence financial decisions, including the importance of saving money, supporting family, or investing in community needs.

We had several discussions and lessons tied to reading units in class. A stand out is the unit To Kill a Mockingbird which deals with racism and intolerance.

I have incorporated multiculturalism into my classroom with books representing different cultures, demographics of people, and ethnicities.

I set up play areas with dolls, dress-up clothes, and props representing different cultures to encourage imaginative play that reflects the diversity of the classroom community and the wider world.

Reading and discussing stories about different cultures within the reading curriculum

I included multiculturalism in my classroom through our social studies units, where we learned about different cultures and traditions. I also picked read aloud books that showed diverse characters and experiences. Plus, our reading curriculum had passages that highlighted a variety of cultures.

Picture books, storyline online, and read-alouds that feature diverse characters and setting. Students are able to see characters of different races, languages, family structures, and abilities in these stories. We also use basic greetings in other languages and discuss where you might here these words. Maps of the world with discussions of different things celebrated there, eaten there, worn there, etc. Scholastic readings offer videos that go with their multicultural readings.

In the study of chemistry, we talk about models of the atom and how we got to where we are. We discuss men and women from many different countries and their contributions to our knowledge. Students also are assigned a scientist and they have to report on this.

I did a Holidays around the World unit before break. We talked about traditions, foods, decorations and such from 4 different countries.

We are always talking about how everyone has their strengths and areas to grow no matter their abilities, disabilities, race, culture, etc.

February is Black history month. Spent the entire month incorporating lessons about African Americans and contributions they have made. Did multiple research projects in library classes as well.

Our exchange student Lucia served as my teacher's aide this year. She was able to share the Spanish culture with my Spanish I and II students as well help us throughout the year.

Please describe how you have incorporated multiculturalism into another one of your classes and/or content areas.

I incorporate multiculturalism in business communication by emphasizing how culture plays an important role in shaping communication styles, expectations, and workplace behaviors.

Another lesson is when we covered Night, we covered anti-semitism and it's effects both then and now on society.

I have incorporated multiculturalism into my classroom through music and musical instruments from different countries around the world.

I brought in picture books from all kinds of cultures and languages, with characters from different backgrounds. During storytime, I read stories that showed cultural traditions, holidays, and everyday life from places all over the world.

Skin tone crayons and markers are always available for my students. We use songs and brain breaks from a variety of cultures (simple African drum beats for clean-up or latin music for transitions). We celebrate holidays around the world during the month of December. We try foods from five different countries, learn how and what they celebrate, create a craft resembling something from that country, and learn all about their culture.

In biology, we talk about genetic distribution of traits in different cultures and how that affects the way they live. We talk about how differences are a result of natural selection.

Our reading curriculum does a great job of incorporating stories from various cultures.

At Christmas, we looked at different books and how holidays are celebrated around the world. Read several different stories about different winter holidays and the traditions that surround them.

Some of my Spanish students visited hispanic stores and explored what foods and other items they sold as well as trying out various recipes of hispanic foods.
